Less Than 2 Weeks
To Pay Poll Taxes

Less than two weeks is left to pay poll taxes if a voter is to protect his right to vote in the important primaries and general election being held this year.

James L. Sawyer, tax collector for Coffee County, reminds citizens that failure to pay poll taxes before the February 1st deadline means that a person could not vote in the primaries and general election to be held in May and November.

In the May Democratic Primary voters will choose nominees for Governor, all other state offices, some local officials, a U. S. Senator and eight U. S. Congressmen. These nominees will be candidates in the November general election.

Everyone of voting age must pay poll taxes except those exempted as veterans. Poll taxes may be paid by mail by putting a check for $1.50, together with your name, address and voting place, and sent to Mr. Sawyer. It is important that citizens exercise their right to vote.

PEACE OFFICERS MEET

The Coffee County Peace Officers Association meeting will be held tonight (Thursday) at 8:30 at the Elba Grill. The program will be a film on "Criminal Investigation," supplied by the Proctor's Marshal's Office at Ft. Rucker.

SPAGHETTI SUPPER

Young people of the Elba Assembly of God church will sponsor a spaghetti supper Friday night, January 26th, from 5:30 until 7 o'clock. An invitation is extended to everyone.

Governor's Race
Steps Up Pace
As Wallace Qualifies

J. O. Wintzell, of 605 Dauphin St., Mobile, Alabama, announces his candidacy for Governor of Alabama, this week, and says he intends to be frank and honest "for the time being" but reserves the right to change after being elected.

In his statement, he says "You taxpayers have had the New Deal, the Fair Deal, Square Deal, and now our party wants to give you a Triple Deal (T-R-O-U-K-A)." He says he is out to give the people of Alabama a "raw deal"—one gallon of raw oil in every refrigerator.

He says his father never planted a row of cotton in his life and that a family garden was a religious "blue vote" but was interested in the support of all the Baptist because they are the only ones who could elect him without a run-off.

He promises to "out-promise" any candidate in the race.

JUDGE GEORGE C. WALLACE of Clanton officially announces that he is a candidate for governor in the Democratic primary May 1.

"The Little Judge" received more than a quarter of a million votes as runner-up in the 1958 governor's race. He said the critical years ahead will demand dedicated Christian leadership from our leaders and the best from every Alabama citizen.

Wallace said it is also time we reassert our faith in our state and Stand Up for Alabama! A long time fighter for constitutional government and the Southern way of life, Wallace said we must stand up to those outsiders who would interfere in our traditions.

Two Candidates Qualify
For Attorney General
In Democratic Primary

Perry and Livingston
Announce Intentions
To Qualify

WALTER EMMETT PERRY, Jr., Chairman of the Jefferson County legislative delegation, said today that he will qualify as a candidate for Attorney General of the State of Alabama in the Democratic primary in May.

In a prepared statement Perry said that, if elected, he would bring suit in the state courts to re-apportion the state.

Perry, who has served two terms in the Alabama House of Representatives said that he was an "absolute segregationist." He said further that he would "assist and lead any program which may bring wealth to our state, and prosperity to our citizens."

Terminating the Attorney General's post as "the people's attorney," Perry said that he would "personally appear in every court in the country in which the people of Alabama have an interest in the proceedings and I will be prepared to argue vigorously our cause."

Perry is married to the former Elizabeth Derran of Mobile and the father of four children. A Navy veteran, Perry is a practicing attorney in Birmingham.

Willard W. Livingston, Chief Assistant Attorney General, said today that he will be a candidate for Attorney General of Alabama in the May Democratic Primary.

He said he will qualify when the Democratic Executive Committee meets on January 20 in Montgomery. His announcement confirmed speculation of recent months that he would seek the office.

Livingston has served as Assistant Attorney General for almost a decade and half. He has served the last three years as Chief Assistant Attorney General.

Born 47 years ago in Notulula, Livingston is the son of Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice J. Ed Livingston and the late Mrs. Marie Wise Livingston. A graduate of Tusculum College, a member of the University of Alabama with an AB and Law Degree, he is a member of the Montgomery County and Alabama Bar Association.

Enlisting as a private in the 167th Infantry of the Alabama National Guard in 1933, Livingston served five and a half years in World War II. He now holds the rank of Colonel in the Air Force Reserve with 28 years of military service, active and reserve.

Livingston said he has resigned as Chief Assistant Attorney General effective January 15 in order to enter the race for Attorney General. "I intend to make an active and vigorous race in every county in the state," he said.

Livingston is married to the former Ann Key Murphree, of Troy. They are the parents of five children, three boys and two girls, ages 7 to 19. Livingston is a Baptist, Legionnaire and Notarian.

W. A. (Bing) Lecroy
Announces Candidacy
For State School Post

W. A. (BING) LECROY announces his candidacy for State Superintendent of Education. In his statement he said he believed that the public schools of Alabama are on the threshold of a new day, and apparently more citizens than ever before are realizing the need for a strong school system to help the state grow and prosper in the years ahead.

Lecroy is asking the people of Alabama to give him the opportunity to serve as State Superintendent of Education for the next four years, because he says, he feels that he can successfully meet the challenge of understanding the problems and potential of the schools, working in harmony with school people, the State Legislature and with the lay citizens of Alabama to build a better educational system.

We Now Have Two Homes . . .

We moved! And I guess we'll be moving for weeks to come. We continue to maintain our home in Florida, also, and spent the weekend there. We returned to Elba Sunday afternoon and had the trunk and the back seat piled just as high as we could get it. And already we find there are several other items we need. So now we're making a list of the things to bring on our next trip to Florida. We will be spending a part of each week in Florida with the newspaper there so now instead of traveling to Elba every day, we'll have a place to sleep wherever dark catches us.

Since we can't move our voting rights to this county for a year, we'll continue to vote in Covington County until January 1963 when we plan to change to Coffee.

I feel as if we're already long

Lucile K. Woodham McRae

We continued to see a lot of water through Mississippi and La., and the booming Calcasieu River was all over the place, the water standing right on up to the highway. When we crossed the Sabine River, which forms part of the boundary between the state of Louisiana and Texas, I began to realize why it is called the "Lone Star" state. I have never seen anything so vast. Texas has almost as strange a fascination for me as to those people who live in Texas and live breathe and boast of Texas. It would take me months to tell you about the things we saw and did in Texas, which really does seem to be "bigger than the United States."

During the romantic history of Texas, it has flown six flags, the French, planted by La Salle over an ill-fated colony on the coast, the Spanish, the Mexican, the "lone star" banner of its independent statehood, the Stars and Stripes and the flag of the Southern Confederacy. As all who visit Texas, I was amazed by the size of the state. It covers more territory than France, Belgium, Holland and Denmark combined. Its irregular southwestern boundary line separating it from Mexico follows the lower course of that colorful "big river", the Rio Grande, for 1300 miles. Its eastern coast is washed for 400 miles by the Gulf in the Lone Star State.

Texas windmills furnish water for stock and home use on the ranches for farms and we saw many of them at work. We were told that some Easterners have asked if they are desert air conditioners.

We went into Texas by Highway 90, through Beaumont, Houston, San Antonio, Uvalde, Del Rio, Langtry, Sanderson, Alpine. You should not go west without spending a lot of time in Texas. Texans claim that they have everything and I sort of agree with them. The state has a strange fascination about it, sort of romantic, I guess. They have some personal friends in the governor's race, as well as to other spots. Never have we had to face such a decision as we're forced to do now. We can't cast but one vote for governor and we don't want to vote against our friends. We'll just wait and see what develops as the campaign gets going and the candidates make a few

Polio is exciting and interesting, but it can get rough, too. Of Mexico. Across the state from the northwestern corner of the "panhandle" as the northern projection of the state is called, to the mouth of the Rio Grande, is a greater distance than that between Chicago and New York. From El Paso, on its western tip, to the Sabine River on the east, the distance is but 100 miles shorter. Its railroads would reach two-thirds of the distance around the earth. A Texas editor has described the size of the state like this: "If all the people in the United States were put into Texas, it would scarcely be a third as crowded as England."

We arrived in San Antonio and the Alamo just minutes after it had closed, but we spent some time going around it and picturing that long ago and strangely fascinating history of its heroic but unsuccessful defense the most striking event in the Texas wars, according to history, for its independence.

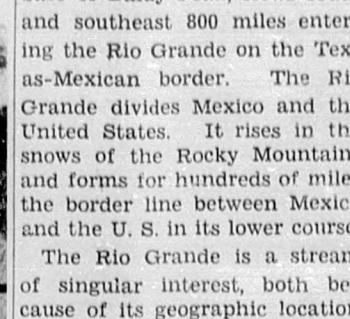

We visited the home of John Nance Garner, Franklin D. Roosevelt's first vice-president at Uvalde. The Garner home has been given to the state and is now recognized as the Garner Memorial. Garner is 83 years of age, and continues to live in a little house in the back that badly needs painting. Garner is now a craggy old man and because of it he does not have a lot of friends visiting him now as he did in his earlier years when he was an American political leader.

When you enter Texas you're welcomed by a beautiful stone marker which is admired by visitors as they enter the state. These markers are located on the State line of each highway and is said to be perhaps the most photographed monument saw nothing but small sand bushes, cactus and a few unhappy trees and hills everywhere. Reminded me of the surface of the earth covered with "pinpiles." Rivers that had water in them at all were just mud puddles, but many were dry and waded tracks running up and down the river beds. We passed through Brackettville where the U. S. Cavalry was located and it remains with the appearance of a wild and wooly country as it was in the old days. We crossed Devils River which is surrounded by arroyos and hills of rocks. The scenery was beautiful, but like another world from our wonderful state of Alabama. The road winds through brown, green rocks, but necessary to travel over some of them. I never did understand how those unhappy looking bushes manage to survive, and apparently they have a hard time doing it. The road follows the "buffalo trails" of long ago. When the road was built it was found that these trails were the best way to get through and around these rocks.

We crossed the Pecos River, which runs parallel with the Guadalupe mountain range to its junction with the Rio Grande and a sight never to be forgotten. The Pecos River itself, can be waded in most places but has cut a canyon almost 300 feet deep. The bridge we crossed is 287 feet above the shallow stream and then the highway is cut down through the rock hills on each side. The bridge 237 feet above the water is the lowest part of the drive. There where we crossed the Pecos is one of the most picturesque and awe inspiring spots I have ever seen. The Pecos River is the chief tributary of the Rio Grande, rises in New Mexico at the base of Baldy Peak, flows south and southeast 800 miles entering the Rio Grande on the Texas-Mexican border. The Rio Grande divides Mexico and the United States. It rises in the snows of the Rocky Mountains and for hundreds of miles the border line between Mexico and the U. S. in its lower course.

The Rio Grande is a stream of singular interest, both because of its geographic location and because of the colorful and contrasting phases it presents in its 1,800-mile course from southwestern Colorado to the Gulf. Until recent years the Rio Grande was a constant source of trouble and dispute and even international dispute since it was designated as the source of the boundary line at the close of the Mexican War. Its shifting current and the diverting of water for irrigation projects caused frequent contention. Trouble also arose because of the fact that for months in the year it shrinks in its proportions. It is in many places it can be forded on foot or horseback, and smugglers and bandits found no difficulty in crossing from one country to the other. Because of bandits crossing from Mexico into the United States, troops stationed at Fort Bliss, El Paso and other border towns kept a constant outlook for offenders and the "line riders" mounted constant inspections, watch trails, and passes in this wild stretch of country.

Where the Pecos River enters the Rio Grande near the town of Del Rio, there is a canyon hundreds of feet deep cut into the rock. Windmills are all about in this mesquite country where we

New Arthritis Test Developed By March of Dimes Research

A new and sensitive blood test for diagnosing rheumatoid arthritis in children was one of the medical achievements of 1961 highlighted by The National Foundation in a year-end review of progress by March of Dimes-supported scientists.

The report, by Dr. Thomas M. Rivers, vice president for medical affairs of the Foundation, cited accomplishments related to birth defects, virus diseases, polio and genetics as well as arthritis.

Dr. Rivers also noted that 1961 will be memorable because of the licensing by the U. S. Government of two of the three component types of Salk oral polio vaccine which, like the Salk killed-virus vaccine, was developed with money given to the March of Dimes.

The new arthritis test was developed by Dr. Morris Ziff and his research associates at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School in Dallas. In their study, the Salk killed-virus vaccine, proved positive in 79 per cent of children with rheumatoid arthritis.

By contrast, other tests currently in use seldom pinpoint the disease in more than 20 per cent of youngsters known to have it, according to Dr. Rivers.

Dr. Rivers pointed out that few people realize how very serious rheumatoid arthritis can be in children, or how common it is among them. It is estimated that there are about 50,000 children under 15 in the U. S. who have it, many of whom are severely crippled, he said.

It is also suspected many other youngsters may have the disease, with perhaps only minor or vague pains and no clear-cut symptoms to label as the ailment.

The arthritis test, which is particularly sensitive in detecting an unusual blood fraction frequently found in persons with rheumatoid arthritis, may fill its greatest role in uncovering undiagnosed rheumatic disease in children.

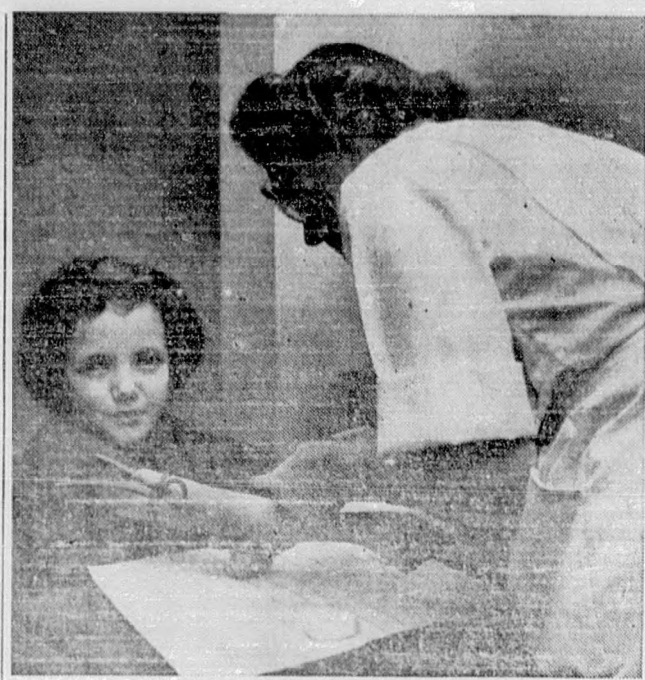

This could be vitally important, because the earlier diagnosis is made and treatment begun, the better the chances for prevention of disability in young victims of the disease.

A second scientific achievement highlighted in The Foundation's year-end review was a special field study which disclosed that a great many birth defects are not detectable in early life but may remain hidden until infants reach the age of one or two.

This report was made by a research team headed by Dr. Frank R. Lusk of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Winston-Salem, N. C.

Among the other developments singled out in the March of Dimes research progress report were the following:

1. Dr. Joseph L. Melnick of Baylor University has come up with two chemical discoveries which promise major improvements in the manufacture of oral polio vaccine. It had previously been necessary to keep

Strift - Slow Actions '100 YEARS AGO'

BY L. O. BRACKEN
Auburn, Alabama

Who knows but that the Confederates' failure to raise troops rapidly in 1862 could have been caused by continued bickering between the Military and the Administration? And that a continued delay in military action by Union George B. McClellan, General-in-Chief, led to the issuance of the famous War Order Number 1 by President Abraham Lincoln?

Two Confederate Generals, Joseph E. Johnston and P. G. B. Beauregard long argued with Secretary of War Judah P. Benjamin over military details. Such controversy led to a new assumption for Beauregard from the Secretary of War.

B & PW Club of Elba To Make Contribution To Nursing Project

The Elba Business and Professional Women's Club will contribute to the Nursing Project, adopted in 1941 by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club. This project provides young girls in the Republic of Nationalist China (Formosa) with the opportunity to enter the professional field of nursing.

Coordinating its efforts through the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club, made many contributions by granting subsidies to hospitals, medical and nursing students, and by supplying medical and hospital equipment to the schools and health institutions in Free China.

In 1942, an initial donation of $700.00 started the support of 28 nurses for one year in emergency medical training in Kwei, Yung, China.

By 1943, the National Federation had contributed $7150 for general expenses for the program.

At the 1961 National BFW Convention, the Chinese Nurses Home (to be named the Dr. Minnie L. Maffett Nurses Home) was incorporated into the Chinese Project. The obligation has been assumed to provide adequate living quarters for 170 nurses in the final stages of their education. The cost for this project will be $100,000. There is a great need for this project. Adequate dormitories exist only for students in the first two years of training.

Not only will the National Defense Medical Center serve as a center of efficient medical and health training, adopted to Asian needs—it can be a model of friendly American cooperation in constructive service to the peoples of all Southeastern Asian countries.

The Elba Business and Professional Women's Club will contribute its share to this project during the month of February, which has been designated as International Federation Month. Each member will donate one dollar at the next meeting to be held February 12.

In Los Angeles County General Hospital alone, more than 1,000 patients die annually after a stroke. Statistics across the rest of the country are similar. To find out why shock occurs and to work out effective measures against it, the University of Southern California School of Medicine has begun a three-year study.

A six-bed shock ward, staffed 24 hours a day, has been opened at County Hospital. There, shock sufferers will receive optimum care. Physiological effects, now poorly understood, will be measured. The data will be recorded and later analyzed by electronic computers. The doctors believe their study will help blunt the threat of shock in whatever way it strikes.

THE PROXIMOLOGY, a study of tree rings, is a pointed out a great leap forward, according to Prof. Harold C. Fritts of the University of Arizona. Fritts says that tree rings hold accurate records of climate conditions that governed the tree's growth and that new statistical concepts make it possible to determine rainfall, temperatures, evaporation and other factors that occurred in any given year during the tree's span of life.

Miss Annette Sasser and Mr. David Mount Are Wed At Lovely Church Ceremony

An evening ceremony at the First Assembly of God Church, January 8th, united in marriage Miss Annette Sasser, daughter of Reverend and Mrs. Rye Sasser, and David Mount, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mount of Glenwood.

The Reverend D. T. Benefield was the officiating minister at the double ring ceremony.

Miss Annette Sasser, sister of the bride, played a medley of popular music prior to the ceremony. She played the tradition at processional and recessional wedding marches.

Church decorations featured white mums and glads in stand and baskets against a background of large palms and evergreen. A white wrought iron arch entwined with small white flowers and delicate greenery was flanked on either side with lighted white candles burning in pyramid effect in cathedral candelabra.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of white satin was fashioned with long lace sleeves that ended in points over the wrists. Her only ornament was a pearl necklace, a gift from the groom. Her finger-ring veil of white silk illusion was attached to a crown of pleated illusion edged with seed pearls. She carried a white Bible with an orchid bouquet studded with white satin love-knots.

Mr. John Daniel Mount, sister-in-law of the groom, attended the bride as matron of honor and serving as bridesmaids were Mrs. Tom Colnett and Mrs. Edward Dooley. They wore identical street-length dresses of pink satin fashioned in sheath style. Their floor veils were of pink net. The matron of honor carried a colonial bouquet of pink split carnations and the bridesmaids wore shoulder corsages of the same.

Rickey and Mickey Mack, sons of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Mack, lighted the candles. Usher-Groomsmen were Glen Johnson and Ben Carpenter.

The brides parents entertained in the Fellowship Hall of the church immediately following.

Children's 14th Annual Dental Week Is Set For February 4 - 10th

February 4 through 10 is the 14th annual National Children's Dental Health Week. As part of the observance, The Elba Clipper, in cooperation with the Third District Dental Society this week gives typical questions asked about dental health, and the authoritative answers.

Is thumb-sucking harmful? My daughter is two years old and sucks her thumb when she is going to sleep.

Dental and medical authorities generally agree that thumb-sucking in the young child is itself is not bad. There is a strong basic instinct in the infant for sucking. This is one of the larger factors in the start of thumb and finger sucking.

Because of this, when a young infant starts to thumb-suck after a feeding, the usual suggestion is to prolong the feeding by using nipples with smaller holes, for example, in the case of bottle-fed babies. A pacifier may be of help in this respect.

It should also be noted that eruption of the teeth has no relationship to intelligence. Old wives' tales to the contrary.

When the dentist cleans and seals my teeth doesn't that scrape off enamel? Can't the teeth be damaged this way?

No, to both questions. There is no evidence that dental physicians is harmful to the teeth. On the other hand, there is very definite evidence that it is beneficial. Cleaning of the teeth in this way prevents a dangerous accumulation of calculus on the teeth. In this cleaning the most important factor is the careful removal of deposits (sometimes called tartar) from around each individual tooth. This is an important measure in preventing periodontal (gum) disease.

My child is six months old and does not have any teeth yet. Is there something wrong with him?

No. Eruption of the first teeth

Check the seam allowance when you buy a new garment. Seams should be at least five-eighths inch wide.

There are about 18 different kinds of natural cheese, and no two kinds are made by the same method.

Contour sheets are a cinch to put on if you do opposite corners first.

Dip the cork of your shoe boot in paraffin and let it dry. It won't stick again.
